

Old Enough to Know

You ask me if I loved her
And I did - all those years ago
But is that now behind me?
I'm afraid the answer's no.

'Cause I don't believe that love is lost forever
I don't think you can let the feelings go
We all pretend and I suppose it's best for those involved
But you and I are old enough to know

They say that love's a blessing
But you know when it becomes a curse
You may still love another
Which I guess just makes it even worse

And I don't believe that love is lost forever
I don't think you can let the feelings go
We all pretend and I suppose it's best for those involved
But you and I are old enough to know

I cannot be your first love
But I can hope to be your last
I'll share you with your memories
Like you share me with my past

'Cause I don't believe that love is lost forever
I don't think you can let the feelings go
We all pretend and I suppose it's best for those involved
But you and I are old enough to know
